THE BUNDU POT RESTAURANT

Treats you to sumptuous meals of South African flavourings prepared by our Zulu chefs, Susan and Busisiwe. The atmosphere is warm and welcoming, inviting new and interesting friendships. Guests gather in the central lodge or traditional braais are held outdoors around the crackling fire where the feeling of true Africa reaches every soul.

While you wait for our chefs to lovingly prepare your meal, marvel at the endless view from the Shayamoya decks. It is a panoramic scene of the Pongola River which feeds Lake Jozini, surrounded by the KZN Ezemvelo Phongolo Nature Reserve and the private Pongola Game Reserve, and in the North, the Kingdom of Swaziland. This is all held together with the majestic Lebombo Mountains.

This corner of Northern Natal is a region where folklore is steeped in superstition and myth. A favourite tale is the myth of Nkanyamba, a seven-headed serpent prowling the skies in the belly of a dark cloud while strafing the heavens with his fiery, lightning tongue. According to local lore, this monster is able to travel from lake to lake during thunderstorms. It is also believed that H. Rider Haggard, author of King Solomons Mines, stationed at the Ubombo court house during the late nineteenth century, based his book on the gem stones and caves found in the Lebombo Mountains.

If you should trace the Great Rift Valley southwards on a course of more than 3 000 miles, you approach the Indian Ocean via the Lebombo Uplands. This geological fault line will eventually peter out somewhere within the vast basin of the Pongola River. Here lies Lake Jozini also known as Pongolapoort dam. The dam was once a bone of contention as it lay virtually empty until 1984 when the Demoina floods filled the 20 000 ha of expanse in only 4 days!

Historically, this land North of the Pongola River used to be part of Swaziland. It was handed over to the Zuid Afrikaanse Republic in the 1800's to form a buffer zone between the Zulu tribe and the Swazis who were experiencing attacks on their families and cattle from the Zulus. As no one wanted to live between these tribes, and due to many species of animals dying off from prolific hunting to rid the area of tsetse fly and Nagana, Paul Kruger proclaimed this area a Game Reserve, the first ever to be proclaimed in Africa in 1894. The Pongola Game Reserve Proclamation is on display together with a map of the area behind the buffet counter.

NANDI, THE RESIDENT SPOTTED EAGLE OWL AND OLD FRIEND

Nandi and her 3 siblings arrived in the year 2000 from CROW, Centre for Rehabilitation of Wildlife. They were released 2 weeks after being localized in an aviary being fed day-old chicks.

A few months later, Nandi interacted with Lindy on the lodge railings and a wonderful friendship with humans was formed.

Guests frequently see Nandi around the lodge so keep your eyes peeled. You might just be honoured by a visit from her at your chalet.
